OVERVIEW

Matt represents clients in complex litigation, regulatory, and compliance matters. He has significant experience defending class action and multidistrict litigations involving statutory and common law privacy claims and responding to government investigations and inquiries. With experience in venues throughout the U.S., Matt handles matters in federal and state courts as well as in mediations and arbitrations. His diverse practice also includes litigating construction, real estate, franchise-related matters, and other business disputes.

Matt's varied pro bono practice includes representing disabled children who are denied supplemental security income as part of the firm's New Jersey Children's Supplemental Security Income Program, and representing nursing and rehabilitation homes in guardianship litigation.

Before joining the firm, Matt served as in-house counsel for an international hotel and resort chain.
