As shifting regulatory landscapes shape his clients' challenges at both the federal and state levels, Drew responds with effective action. Public utilities consult Drew for his experience successfully advocating for the industry on a wide spectrum of issues.

OVERVIEW

Drew represents public utilities with respect to all manner of legislative and regulatory issues, including administrative litigation, regulation compliance and governmental affairs before the Georgia General Assembly. He also advises public utilities on a wide range of federal and state regulatory issues, including administrative actions, regulatory and statutory compliance, supply-side recourse construction monitoring, privacy, open records law requests, and customer service issues. Drew has more than 20 years of experience representing utilities in various matters, including resource planning; rate design; cost-of-service issues in rate cases; supply-side resource certification; electric vehicle charging service deployment; and demand-side management program design, implementation and certification.

Drew has extensive experience in government ethics compliance and election law, providing guidance to companies, trade associations and political action committees (PACs) on federal and state laws relating to lobbyist registration and reporting, gifts for public officials, and political campaign contributions and expenditures. He also assists clients in the formation and administration of corporate-sponsored and independent PACs on the federal, state and local levels. Drew has particular experience counseling public utilities, corporations and U.S. subsidiaries of international companies on the specific federal and state laws and rules that apply to those entities.

Adept at navigating public policy issues, Drew has represented clients before the Georgia Public Service Commission and has successfully lobbied to amend state statutes that affect them. Beyond Georgia, Drew has counseled electric utilities concerning regulatory issues in Alabama, Florida, Illinois, Maryland, Mississippi, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia.

Drew also has significant experience in connection with state regulatory treatment of wholesale sales, the Georgia Open Records Act, the Georgia Administrative Procedure Act, trade secret filings and the Georgia deregulated natural gas market.
