OVERVIEW

Nick represents a diverse range of clients, from startup polymer and biotech companies to established pharmaceutical and materials science corporations. He manages complex patent portfolios and conducts thorough legal research for due diligence and litigation projects.

Nick also provides critical analysis of patent portfolios for various financial transactions. He has extensive experience in patent procurement, patentability, and infringement opinion research, particularly within the chemical, pharmaceutical, polymer, inorganic material, and biotechnology sectors.

Nick manages intellectual property portfolios for emerging polymer adhesive and biotech companies, assists in the development of commercial small-molecule pharmaceutical products, and counsels venture capital organizations on the patent landscape of new and established pharmaceutical products.

Nick's background includes working as a registered patent agent at prominent intellectual property firms in New York City while completing his law degree.
