OVERVIEW

Patrick advises businesses and executives in a broad range of business, commercial, and employment-related disputes. He represents clients in state and federal courts and in administrative forums in matters such as complex litigation, corporate governance disputes, contract actions and tort-related matters.

Patrick regularly litigates on behalf of clients in state and federal court in the areas of discrimination, harassment, retaliation, wrongful termination, breaches of employment contracts, restrictive covenants, and other state and federal employment issues. He also advises employers on everyday employment matters including employee policies, handbooks, offer letters, employment contracts, and separation agreements.
