Alex employs his research, writing, and oral advocacy skills to guide his clients in making informed, strategic decisions throughout all stages of the legal process.

OVERVIEW

Alex focuses his practice on helping clients in the construction industry. Before joining the firm, he worked in many capacities in the legal field, including as a legal assistant, paralegal, law clerk, and interned at the Georgia Supreme Court and U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Georgia. In those experiences, Alex gained exposure to various types of cases ranging from small insurance disputes to multimillion dollar settlements.

During law school, Alex served as president of the Latinx and Caribbean Law Student Association. He obtained many awards such as best brief in a national moot court competition with his team and was one of eight students in his class inducted into the Order of the Barristers, a national honorary society. Each of these experiences has allowed Alex to constantly develop his research, writing, and advocacy skills, which he now utilizes to help his clients meet their goals in both transactional and litigation matters.
