Sean's understanding of intellectual property law and his pivotal role in significant transactions, such as representing a global pharmaceutical company's acquisition of a specialty firm and negotiating critical platform licenses, make him a trusted advisor for protecting and leveraging intellectual assets.

OVERVIEW

Sean focuses on intellectual property matters, including the protection and licensing of copyrights, trademarks, and trade secrets. He represents clients across various industries, such as consumer food products, manufacturing, specialty chemicals, digital media, banking, insurance, hospitality, and entertainment.

Sean assists clients with the selection, screening, registration, and protection of trademarks, and assists with negotiating and drafting patent, trademark, and software licenses. His work extends to information technology agreements, including application service provider arrangements and outsourcing transactions. He also has significant experience preparing and responding to cease and desist letters involving trademark, copyright, and patent infringement.

Sean also advises clients on mergers and acquisitions, general business contracts, and financing transactions involving significant intellectual property assets. He represents clients in significant deals, such as the negotiation of master agreements for platform-as-a-service solutions, technology licenses for drilling rig monitoring systems, and the acquisition of specialty pharmaceutical companies.

Clients appreciate Sean's comprehensive approach and his dedication to their success. They often highlight his ability to navigate complex legal landscapes, helping to ensure robust protection and strategic utilization of their intellectual property assets.
