OVERVIEW

Taylor represents clients across various industries, including banking, consumer products, energy, financial services, insurance, and technology. His practice focuses on antitrust law, business torts, contract disputes, and government investigations. Taylor handles all phases of litigation in state and federal courts throughout the U.S., from filing to trial. He is particularly experienced in class actions and other complex litigation.

Taylor applies a thorough understanding of his clients' businesses to evaluate their legal risks and help to efficiently resolve conflicts or avoid litigation so they can get back to business.

Taylor maintains an active pro bono practice, representing Dallas/Fort Worth residents in civil lawsuits to help stop illegal activity and shut down crime-ridden properties in local neighborhoods.
