Tim's extensive experience in intellectual property and international corporate law is exemplified by his lead counsel roles in more than 70 high-stakes litigations and his management of several world-class research institutions' comprehensive patent portfolios.

OVERVIEW

Tim devotes his practice to both foreign and U.S. intellectual property and corporate matters, offering tailored solutions for clients' unique needs. He advises clients through all phases of intellectual property law, including patents, trademarks, copyrights, patentability, clearance, infringements, validity, licensing, and patent portfolio management.

Tim's clients range from individual inventors and high-tech startups to large international corporations and prestigious research universities. He represents clients before various U.S. governmental agencies, including the CFIUS, DOJ, OEE of DOC, and SEC. Tim also has extensive experience in commercial and intellectual property litigation, serving as lead counsel in more than 70 cases, including ITC Section 337 investigations.

Tim helps clients navigate complex legal landscapes, particularly when entering, expanding, and sustaining their businesses in the U.S. His technical background as a physicist enhances his understanding of diverse technologies, from telecommunications and nanotechnologies to medical devices and green energy technologies.
