Ziwen is a trusted strategic advisor who helps international companies navigate the complexities of investing and operating in the United States. Her deep experience helps clients seamlessly transition into the U.S. market while avoiding regulatory and operational pitfalls.

OVERVIEW

Ziwen acts as a trusted, outside general counsel-level advisor to international companies expanding into the United States. Clients in the technology, manufacturing, energy, and e-commerce sectors rely on her as their first call when navigating regulatory challenges, government scrutiny, operational issues, or strategic decisions about U.S. expansion.

Ziwen guides clients through every phase of U.S. investment — from structuring entities and managing CFIUS reviews to safeguarding their intellectual property rights. She proactively addresses potential legal risks in contract drafting and negotiations, resolves disputes, and ensures compliance across export control, privacy, employment, and industry-specific regulations.

Ziwen has represented multinational technology and telecommunications companies in government investigations and high-profile litigations, including sensitive national security reviews and other matters under heightened regulatory scrutiny. She also advises energy storage, EV supply-chain companies, and other foreign investors managing complex U.S. compliance requirements. As a native Mandarin speaker, Ziwen bridges cultural and legal differences that often complicate cross-border transactions by combining clear communication with culturally aware, actionable advice.

Ziwen's business-focused counsel — integrated with support across Troutman's international, corporate governance, IP, M&A, technology, employment, and litigation practices — allows her clients to focus on growth while she manages their overlapping legal risks. Whether establishing a greenfield manufacturing facility, acquiring a U.S. company, responding to a government investigation, or resolving day-to-day operational issues, foreign companies trust Ziwen to help them invest successfully in the United States.
